Towards National Standards

➤ Government and public sector organisations' appetites for regulation of PSI

Regulated...at last

National Register of
Public Service Translators

A profession has a governing body when the complexity of service-delivery has risk which needs to be minimalised and mitigated

Regulated professions ensure accountability of professional service delivery by those who are registered and regulated, protecting standards

What NRPST is not....

National Register of
Public Service Translators

Not:

- An agency...
- A union...
- An examining body...
- A regulator of examinations...

According to PARN there are approximately 400 professional bodies in the UK...

Representing most professionals in the UK...

- Learned institutes driving professions and acting for members
- Professional associations and societies acting for members
- NRPST is a regulatory body with qualifying Registrants protecting the public and overseeing agreed professional standards
